A satellite image of the North Atlantic Ocean and surrounding landmasses. Three low-pressure systems, labeled 'L', are visible: one off the coast of North America, one over the central North Atlantic, and one over Western Europe. A high-pressure system, labeled 'H', is located over Eastern Europe and Western Asia. The image shows cloud patterns and sea surface temperatures.

A map of Europe and the surrounding oceans showing four pressure systems labeled with 'L' for Low and 'H' for High. The 'H' is located in the Atlantic Ocean west of the British Isles. The 'L' systems are located over the British Isles, Scandinavia, and the Mediterranean Sea. The map uses a color scale where blue represents lower pressure and red/orange represents higher pressure.
